"COME WITH ME TO MAXIM'S."

MAXIM'S CAFE, in the Kenyon hotel building, has fairly established claim to being called the Delmonico's of the west, not only because of the perfect service and cuisine, but because of the environment in which the diners find themselves and the entertainment that is afforded them by a splendid orchestra and two artists who are far above the accepted standard of cafe entertainers. Miss Leonore Gordon Harrison and Miss Beanie Dumas are extending their engagement at Maxim's because of the demand for their continued services.

Manager E. L. Wille is catering to the best people in Salt Lake and is meeting with unqualified success. A Sunday dinner at Maxim's is a rare treat, indeed, while the business luncheons during the week draw devotees from every profession and business activity. The daily dinners and after-theatre service are features of the cafe. It is justly a popular rendezvous. (Advertisement.)

UNCLE JESSE SPRINGS ONE ON SENATOR SMOOT.

The recent campaign had its humorous sides. Uncle Jesse Knight was delivering a campaign speech in his own inimitable way day at Pleasant Grove one night to a lot of Democrats. "I see," says Uncle Jesse, "that our senior senator complains of Mr. Wilson as a presidential candidate because he is a professor, therefore more of a theorist than a practical man. He compares him to Dr. Maeser, whom you all knew and loved. Now, I'll tell you the difference between our senior senator and Brother Maeser. Brother Maeser was sent for a second time to take charge of a mission in the old country and he took with him thirteen missionaries, making fourteen in the party. Brother Maeser being a careful man, he counted all the party when the conductor came around on the train. He counted only thirteen.

"Mr. Conductor," he said, "I have tickets here for fourteen, but I find there are only thirteen in the party." The conductor counted noses and found fourteen and so reported. Brother Maeser counted once more and found only thirteen. Again the conductor counted and again he counted fourteen.

"You have made the mistake of not counting yourself, sir," said the conductor. And Brother Maeser acknowledged that he hadn't counted himself.

"Now, I want to say that that would not have happened had our senior senator been in Brother Maeser's place."

IT IS ANNOUNCED

—that on or about the first of the year E. H. Callister will become general manager (he now is president) of the Herald-Republican company; adding these duties to those of internal revenue collector which he will relinquish on or about March fourth;

—that James H. Anderson will relinquish the United States marshalship, anticipating the request, to become editor-in-chief of the Herald-Republican;

—that Hiram E. Booth will divide his attention between the Herald-Republican, as general counsel, and the private law practice of the well known firm of which he is a member, having decided to remain no longer as United States district attorney;

—that Arthur L. Thomas will make use of what he has learned through long service in the postoffice department by becoming superintendent of the mailing department of the Herald-Republican;

—unofficially, but sufficiently authenticated to make it appear reasonable, at the same time plausible.

At a recent election of directors of the company these gentlemen were named and they, in turn, named themselves officers. Col. D. C. Jackling and Governor William Spry, not to mention Col. C. E. Loose, are conspicuously absent from the list.
